What a world, I thought, what a world this is! "No," Azver said, but could say nothing else. He held his staff of willow, but it was only wood in. stupidity of mind that follows such a struggle, we began to think that it wasn't a good thing to. "How do you do that?" she asked. to do, to learn? What is she, that you ask this for her?". It looked very old. It had been rebuilt and rebuilt again, but not for a long time. Nor had anyone lived in it for a long time, from the feel of it. But it was a pleasant feeling, as if those who had slept there had slept peacefully. As for decrepit walls, mice, cobwebs, and scant furniture, none of that was new to Irian. She found a bald broom and swept out a bit. She unrolled her blanket on the plank bed. She found a cracked pitcher in a skew-doored cabinet and filled it with water from the stream that ran clear and quiet ten steps from the door. She did these things in a kind of trance, and having done them, sat down in the grass with her back against the house wall, which held the heat of the sun, and fell asleep. now, if the cure didn't take and the beasts died after all. Avert the chance! But I wouldn't ask a wrong turning somewhere. Tall reeds rose up close beside the paths, so that if a light shone. Grove, he told her that, with Roke Knoll, it had stood since Segoy made the islands of the world, at him. "My name is Irian," she said. He looked from one sister to the other: the one so mild and so immovable, the other, under her. Patterner here. I'd like to learn more about your name." Inmost Sea, said the man from Stormcloud, one straggling after the other like the dogs that lost. The sorcerer came out from behind San. His name was Ayeth. The power in him was small, tainted. "There are good men there," he said. "Great and wise the Archmage certainly was. But he's gone. The hillside in front of him trembled, writhed, and opened. A gash in it deepened, widened. Water sprang up out of it and ran across the wizard's feet. "Something to drink? Prum, extran, morr, cider?". through a curtain of warm, moving air. held the other end, following him. He let Otter walk into a couple of the spells, and after that. the eldest, the Doorkeeper, Segoy. "Irian," he said, and now her name came easily, sweet and cool as spring water in his dry mouth. "She's very sick, Rush," the girl said. She looked again at Tern. "You're not a healer?" It was an accusation. the winter long, out on the high marsh. It was as strangely quiet as the farmlands. Not a voice, not a face. It was difficult to feel uneasy in an ordinary-looking town on a sweet spring morning, but in such silence he must wonder if he was indeed in a plague-stricken place or an island under a curse. He went on. Between a house and an old plum tree was a wash line, the clothes pinned on it flapping in the sunny breeze. A cat came round the corner of a garden, no abandoned starveling but a white-pawed, well-whiskered, prosperous cat. And at last, coming down the steep little street, which here was cobbled, he heard voices. "I'm tired of teaching and talking," he said. "I need silence. Is that enough for you?". but sometimes one can get into the reals. . . All the wizards and armed men Maharion could command went out to fight the dragons,.... No wind. No birdcall. No distant lowing or bleating or call of voice. As if all the island had gone still. Not a fly buzzed. They went on through darkness, seeing only the track before them in the dim silvery glow of werelight shot through by silver lines of rain. When she stumbled he caught her arm. After that they went on pressed close side by side for comfort and for the little warmth. They walked slower, and yet slower, but they walked on. There was no sound but the sound of the rain falling from the black sky, and the little kissing squelch of their sodden feet in the mud and wet grass of the track. "It was only a beast healer's manual," Crow admitted, when they were sailing on and he had calmed. "Said he thought he'd better keep the doors," said the Herbal. He closed is many-pocketed pouch. It was small, half mud and reeds, with one vague, boggy path to the water, and no track on that but goat-hoofs. The water was dark, though it lay out under the bright sky and far above the peat soils. Dulse followed the goat-tracks, growling when his foot slipped in the mud and he wrenched his ankle to keep from falling. At the brink of the water he stood still. He stooped to rub his ankle. He listened. to him, words he had never said or thought before, that he thought he had spoken them in the True. "Where old Early went with the great fleet. I see. Friends there.
