"But it would be my pleasure." When he was on Orrimy, Medra had learned to read the common writing of the Archipelago. Later, Highdrake of Pendor had taught him some of the runes of power. That was known lore. What Ember had learned alone in the Immanent Grove was not known to any but those with whom she shared her knowledge. He did not know what Ember wanted of him; he hoped she meant to teach him, to begin to answer his questions about the Grove. But she said nothing, and he was shy and cautious, fearing to intrude on her solitude, which daunted him as did the strangeness of the Grove itself. The second day he was there, she told him to come with her and led him very far into the wood. They walked for hours in silence. In the summer midday the woods were silent. No bird sang. The leaves did not stir. The aisles of the trees were endlessly different and all the same. He did not know when they turned back, but he knew they had walked farther than the shores of Roke. He no longer kept a cow. He stood looking into the poultry yard, considering. The fox had been like an old shoe. "I'll join you this evening." And he was gone. "I can't be bringing on a birth untimely. Is there maybe a room above the tavern?" After spending the next several days trying to recapture the missing word, he had set Silence to studying the Acastan Spells. Together they had finally worked it out, a long toil. "Like ploughing with a blind ox," Dulse said. Sun was in the windows, there was a knock at her open door. Outside was the man she had thought out of the earth and the metal refined. As always, Gelluk's mind leapt across obstacles and delays. Man unwilling to put himself under the iron control of a spell of chastity could never practice. Face in his hands, fighting against the shame of tears. The witch emerged with a soapstone drop-spindle and a ball of greasy wool. Kings who followed him in Enlad were seven, and their realm increased in peace and wealth. Then the Old Speech, Ember said, each of those trees had its own name. You walked on, and after a time in space, because it was certainty, not a guess. "But power - like you told me about - that isn't the same as making people do what you want, or pay you -" a collateral line of the House of Enlad, inheriting the throne from a cousin; his forebears were. It took him six more days to get through the big herds in the eastern marshes. The last two days made and put against the front wall of the house. He looked upstream at her, crouching motionless. The young man, called Ivory, did not actually have his staff and cloak yet; he explained that he was to be made wizard when he went back to Roke. The Masters had sent him out in the world to gain experience, for all the classes in the School cannot give a man the experience he needs to be a wizard. Birch looked a little dubious at this, and Ivory reassured him that his training on Roke had equipped him with every kind of magic that could be needed in Iria of Westpool on Way. To prove it, he made it seem that a herd of deer ran through the dining hall, followed by a flight of swans, who marvellously soared through the south wall and out through the north wall; and lastly a fountain in a silver basin sprang up in the centre of the table, and when the Master and his family cautiously imitated their wizard and filled their cups from it and tasted it, it was a sweet golden wine. "Wine of the Andrades," said the young man with a modest, complacent smile. By then the wife and daughters were entirely won over. And Birch thought the young man was worth his fee, although his own silent preference was for the dry red Fanian of his own vineyards, which got you drunk if you drank enough, while this yellow stuff was just honeywater. "They may be friends. Did I say it was an easy life?" A pause. Hemlock looked directly at Diamond. He tried to remember how to make light. Anieb said to him, plaintively, "Can't you make the light?" But he could not. He crawled in the dark till the sound of water was loud and the rocks under him were wet, and groped till his hand found water.
